Corea's Seven Wonders

First, a hot mineral spring near Kimshan-tao, the healing properties of which are believed by the people to be miraculous. No matter what disease may afflict the patient, a dip in the water proves efficacious.

Second wonder is two springs, situated at a considerable distance from each other—in fact, they have the direction of the entire peninsula between them. They have two peculiarities: When one is full the other is always empty, and, notwithstanding the obvious fact that they are connected by a subterranean passage, one is bitter and the other pure and sweet.

The other wonder is a cold wave cave—a cavern from which a whirling wind perpetually blows. The force of the wind from the cave is such that a strong man cannot stand before it.

A forest that cannot be eradicated is the fourth wonder. No matter what injury is done to the roots of the trees, which are large pines, they will sprout up again directly, like the phoenix from her ashes.

The fifth is the most wonderful of all. It is the famous "floating stone." It stands, or seems to stand, in front of the palace erected in its honor. It is an irregular cube of great bulk. It appears to be resting on the ground free from supports on all sides; but, strange to say, two men at opposite ends of a rope may pass it under the stone without encountering any obstacle whatever.

The sixth wonder is the "hot stone," which from remote ages has been glowing with heat on the top of a high hill.

The seventh and last Corea wonder is a drop of the sweat of Buddha. For thirty years around the large temple in which it is enshrined not a blade of grass will grow. There are no trees or flowers inside the sacred square. Even the animals decline to profane a spot so holy.—North China Herald.

A strange discovery has been made at Herndon, N. M., which shows that a most horrible murder has been committed at some period long past. One of the oldest places in the town is a large adobe house on the southern outskirts, which is said to be the oldest house in the Territory. This house was built by the Spaniards when they first came to this country, and has been added to and taken from until only a small part of the original building remains. This remaining portion consists of the central portion and was left on account of the solidity of the walls. It was determined, however, not long ago by the owner to tear away part of this wall and change the shape of the building. Workmen were employed to tear down the wall, and they had made but a few blows with their tools when they found that the apparently solid wall was hollow, and they so reported to the owner of the house. He told them to go very carefully, for they might find something that was valuable. The men cut through two tiers of adobe and found that they were entering a cavity. An opening was made large enough to throw the lumber, and it was discovered that the cavity was small and contained nothing but a skeleton. An investigation showed that some man had been chained to the wall and left to die of hunger and thirst. On the wall near the staple where the chain was attached was scratched the words "Manuel del Muerto," which is supposed to be the name of the unfortunate who was left to die. There is no possible means of determining how long the body had been there, but it must have been placed in the well fully two hundred years ago, for the house has been occupied that long and probably longer by the family which is now in possession, and there is nothing in their history which would indicate that they built the house.
